Raw milk prices went up a bit in the Netherlands. In Germany they were mostly stable, as in France. Availability of milk stays tight. Cream and concentrate prices went up, mostly because some producers needed extra supply to fulfill their contracts.

The cheese market was hit by some uncertainty about consumer-acceptance of higher retail prices for cheese. This does not imply that cheese prices are losing ground in a big way. Rather there is a need for a new direction now that most of the production capacity for the rest of this year has already been contracted.

Prices for skimmed milk powder and wheypowder were a bit weaker this week. One of the factors that SMP was less in demand, was that a big milkpowder tender for Algeria (ONIL) was allotted to Fonterra and not Europe. this also affects wheypowder prices to some extent.
